JANESVILLE SHOWS DECIDED INCREASE IN MANUFACTURERS

INCREASE OF 34 PER CENT IN VALUE OF PRODUCTS AND 31 IN CAPITAL IN PAST FIVE YEARS.

CENSUS FIGURES OUT

United States Census Report on Janesville Manufacturers Gives Comparison of Figures For 1904 and 1909.

According to the figures of the United States census report on the manufacturers of Janesville issued yesterday, there was a decided increase in the value of products and in the capital invested in the factories here. A comparison is given with the report of 1904 with the present one issued, which is for the year 1909.

The summary shows percentages of increase, as follows: Seventy-four per cent in the number of selected officials and clerks; 40 per cent in the cost of materials used; 37 per cent in the value of products; 31 per cent in the capital invested; 28 per cent in the salaries and wages paid; 27 per cent in the value added by manufacture; 8 per cent in the average number of wage earners employed; and 7 per cent in the number of establishments.

Seven New Establishments.
There were seventy-eight establishments in 1909, as compared with seventy-three in 1904, an increase of five, or 7 per cent. The value of products in 1909 was $5,156,000 and $3,845,000 in 1904, an increase of $1,311,000, or 34 per cent. The average per establishment was approximately $66,000 in 1909 and about $53,000 in 1904.

Actual Output.
The value of products represents their selling value or price at the plants as actually turned out by the factories during the census year, and does not necessarily have any relation to the amount of sales for that year. The values under this head also include the amount received for work done on materials furnished by others.

Steam Laundries.
The preliminary totals for steam laundries for Janesville, in 1909, are as follows: Number of establishments, three; capital, $17,000; cost of materials used, $9,000; salaries and wages, $20,000; miscellaneous expenses, $3,000; value of products, $4,000; number of selected officials and clerks, four; and average number of wage earners employed during the year, fifty.

Table Gives Figures.

| | 1909 | 1904 | Per cent of increase |
|--|-------------|-------------|----------------------|
| Number of establishments | 78 | 73 | 7 |
| Capital | $5,157,000 | $3,845,000 | 34 |
| Cost of materials used | $5,157,000 | $3,845,000 | 34 |
| Salaries and wages | $20,000 | $15,700 | 28 |

EMPLOYEES.
Number of selected officials and clerks, 40; average number of wage earners employed during the year, 1,451.

Compared With Beloit.
Figures for Beloit factories were issued several days ago, and while the growth in the Line City has been in many respects more phenomenal than in Janesville, the latter City has outstripped its rival in one or two particulars. The increase in the value of products for Janesville was $1,311,000, or 34 per cent, with the total figure at $5,156,000, and Beloit had a value of $5,485,000 in 1909, and $4,485,000 in 1904, an increase of 22 per cent.

Kenosha Shows Gain.
The summary shows percentages of increase in Kenosha as follows: One hundred and thirty-eight per cent in the capital invested; 121 per cent in the number of selected officials and clerks; 100 per cent in the cost of materials used; 85 per cent in the value of products; 84 per cent in the salaries and wages paid; 69 per cent in the value added by manufacture; 18 per cent in the average number of wage earners employed; 38 per cent in the number of establishments; and 11 per cent in the miscellaneous expenses.

LINK AND PIN. CARPENTERS BUSY RE-ROOFING ICE HOUSE

Extensive Repairs In Progress On Icehouse, Stock Yards and Other Small Jobs.—Will Give Much Work For A Few Months.

Thomas Hordan, foreman carpenter and a force of eight men are busily engaged in tearing off the old shingles from the roof of the company's ice house and putting a new covering of Sapsnet roofing in place. Before putting on the new roofing it has been found necessary to take off the roof boards and place them close together in order to prevent the wind from coming up from beneath and tearing the paper.

This is proving more of a task than it would be to put on an entirely new roof. During these hot days it is found especially uncomfortable to work on the top of the roof, where the sun beats down upon the men and the heat is reflected back by the boards of the roof.

In addition to the work of repairing the roof of the ice house the same crew will have considerable work in rebuilding the adjoining stock yards. Orders for this work have been received already and the work will be pushed forward as soon as the other job is completed, provided the necessary material will be shipped to the place by that time.

Foreman Hordan anticipates a great deal of work during the next few months and thinks that the rush in his department will continue until the cold weather sets in. Other small jobs at various places will take him and his crew away from these larger jobs occasionally and retard this work, slightly unless some extra help can be secured.

One of these smaller jobs is the strengthening of the retaining wall at the coal chute in the South Janesville yards. A pile driver has been ordered and is expected at any time to drive the piles for this wall and Mr. Hordan and his men will be obliged to be on the job to assist in this work.

Volunteer Firemen at Rochester.
Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Rochester is in gala attire in honor of the 5,000 volunteer firemen who have gathered here from cities and towns throughout New York for the annual convention and tournament of their state association. The four days' programme calls for a big parade and numerous prize contests, in addition to the usual business sessions.

To Suppress Play Piracy.
New York, Aug. 15.—An international agreement to prevent play piracy was considered by the National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers at its annual meeting today at the Hotel Astor. Plans for the general betterment of theatrical conditions, and particularly for meeting legislative and other opposition to theatrical interests, also were discussed by the managers.

Germany Likes Peace Plan
Sends Reply to Treaty Proposal to Department of State.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The reply of Germany to the proposition for a general arbitration treaty with the United States was presented to the state department by Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador.

It is understood to be distinctly favorable to the principles laid down by Secretary of State Knox and to preclude the negotiation of a treaty with Germany similar to the pending conventions with Great Britain and France, provided the United States senate does not drastically amend those agreements.

President Taft has about decided not to press the senate to ratify the British and French arbitration treaties at the special session of congress. He has learned that an attempt to have the senate act favorably now might result in four debate and that finally they might be agreed to only in modified form.

Moehlenpah Home IN CLINTON STRUCK

Clinton, Aug. 15.—During the terrible thunderstorm Saturday night the beautiful home of H. A. Moehlenpah on Highland Park avenue was struck by lightning. The chimney was demolished and a hole two feet square was torn in the roof. The electricity entered the bedroom where Mr. and Mrs. Moehlenpah were sleeping and tore a part of the sliding-board to splinters and ripped up the hard-wood floor. The curious and mysterious thing is where or how the lightning entered the bedroom as there is no visible entrance or exit signs. Neither of the occupants of the room were injured.

Prize Pigeons Shot
BY RECKLESS HUNTERS

Alex. Buchanan Loses His Favorite Bird and Finds Others Wounded by Rifle Shots—Youths With 22 Rifles Suspected.

Local pigeon fanciers are very much incensed by the evidence lately secured that some persons are making their birds the target for rifle practice. This evidence was obtained when Alex. Buchanan made a careful inspection of his birds and found marks on their bodies and wing feathers which were evidently made by bullets from a 22-calibre rifle. He learned also that his favorite bird was not to be found and he has concluded that it must have been killed by some thoughtless or malicious person whose rifle bullets wounded the other pigeons.

The safety of the homing pigeons is a matter of great concern for the men who devote their time and attention to the care and training of these remarkable birds and it is to be deplored that any one should be so thoughtless or intentionally wicked as to try to destroy them.

If this is the work of thoughtless youths who are the possessors of small rifles and can find no better targets on which to practice their marksmanship, it is to be hoped that the practice be discontinued at once if they are not prepared to take the consequences of their or their children's thoughtlessness.

There is a law on the statute books which provides a severe penalty for the shooting of homing pigeons or for interfering with them in any way when they are in flight and the local fanciers will prosecute such offenders to the full extent of the law if they are found out.

Mr. Buchanan deplors the loss of his favorite pigeon which was presented to him some time ago by one of the leading pigeon fanciers in the vicinity of Chicago. This bird came to Buchanan's loft after losing his way during one of its flights. As soon as it was learned that this was a straggler, Mr. Buchanan ascertained through correspondence with the central association, which issued the log book, that it was a bird of the name of Mr. Buchanan's own.

Mr. Buchanan then wrote to the owner expressing him of the fact that the pigeon had strayed to this city. In answer to this letter the owner informed Mr. Buchanan that it was rather unusual that the finder of a stray pigeon would go to such trouble and in return for his honesty he could keep the pigeon if he so desired. He stated also that the bird was one of the best he had ever owned.

Since that time the bird has been sent out on the longest flights made by Mr. Buchanan's birds and it was the first to return in the 220-mile flight which was made a short time ago.

LET'S GO TO IT

Under the above caption the new editor of the Wisconsin State Journal, Richard Lloyd Jones, announced, in a four-column editorial, why he came to Madison to engage in newspaper work and outline his ambitions and purposes in a clean-cut statement.

The Gazette welcomes Mr. Jones to the ranks of the state press, and bespeaks for him the success to which he aspires. He brings to his work a choice inheritance by birthright, reinforced by experience in the field of journalism, and the people of Madison may be assured of the fact that they will have a newspaper worthy of the name and the prestige accorded by location in the Capital City.

The newspapers of Madison have long been more or less of a by-word, because they have been run as side businesses to commercial and public printing plants, and while some good men have been connected with the editorial department, they have been handicapped because the paper was not of first consideration.

Mr. Jones comes to the state as a full-fledged progressive of the "Collier Magazine" type, with which publication he was for a time connected. He comes to Wisconsin to enjoy the congenial atmosphere rather than to promote progress, because he is of the opinion that the work of reform has been so thorough that but little is left to be accomplished.

His paper will not be an organ of Senator La Follette, as many supposed, not because he is not in sympathy with the senator—whom he regards as "the ablest student of government and the most constructive statesman in public life today"—but because he no longer needs an organ in the state which he so thoroughly captured a year ago.

He finds that "the newspapers of Wisconsin, taken collectively, have the smallest circulation, in relation to the state's population, of any state in the union except Delaware and Arkansas," and attributes this indifference to the newspapers, which he says are not being edited in the people's interests. He is here to tackle the situation and fill a long-felt want.

It is just possible, as time advances, that he may discover some other obstructions, which publishers longer in the field have attempted in vain to overcome.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when a candidate for governor was defeated on the "little red school house" issue which was simply a demand that the children of the state be taught the language of the country.

sign parentage. The religion of the state is represented by 160,000 protestants, and 1,100,000 Catholics and Lutherans. The metropolis of the state is under socialist rule. These are conditions not duplicated by any state in the union, and they influence the circulation of the secular press.

Mr. Jones is justly proud of the state university and regards the school as a long neglected news center of great value. This is perhaps true, yet the fact remains that 95 percent of the boys and girls of the state enter the university of life from the public schools, and they represent the constituency of the masses, not deeply interested in the state school.

Every paper in the state, of recognized standing, is attempting to serve the people. The day of the organ expended when the junior senator withdrew financial support from the mouthpieces of the senior member.

Editor Jones can show the fraternity a better way to serve the people, the brethren will sit up and take notice. In the meantime may his highest ideals be realized.

AS TO REPUBLICANISM.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean recently published the following editorial on republicanism and what it means. It dwells upon the different utterances of former Presidents and of Taft himself, and then asks the public to draw their own conclusion.

"This country has evidently entered upon a new era of tariff discussion, and not merely with respect to rates and schedules but also with respect to principles of tariff making.

"The democratic leaders, in bringing forward a tariff reduction bill, declare that certain duties are retained only because the revenues are needed. The republican President declares that 'the sound doctrine has become' so and so.

"The editor of the North American Review has been moved by this phrase 'has become' to collect and compare with Mr. Taft's utterances the declarations of his party and predecessors on the subject of the tariff. The contrast is sufficiently striking. For example:

"Revenue . . . should be raised from duties on importations . . . so adjusted as to . . . promote the industries, prosperity and growth of the whole country.—Republican platform of 1872.

"With that declaration the protective policy passed from an economic theory or a war expedient to be the first article in a great party's creed. Re-affirmed in 1876 and 1880 the doctrine was thus amplified in 1884:

"It is the first duty of a good government to protect the rights and promote the interests of its own people. The largest diversity of industry is most productive of general prosperity. . . . We therefore demand . . . duties on foreign imports, not for revenue only, but . . . so levied as to afford security to our diversified industries.

"The republican candidate was beaten in 1884. But the party did not consider the protective policy rejected, for in 1888 it defiantly reaffirmed the dogma:

"We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection. We protect against its destruction, as proposed by the President (Mr. Cleveland), and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will serve the interests of America. We accept the issue and confidently appeal to the people for their judgment.

"Though successful on this defiant affirmation, the republican leaders saw fit, four years later, to tone it down into this:

"We reaffirm the American doctrine of protection. We call attention to its growth abroad. We maintain that the prosperous condition of our country is largely due to the wise revenue legislation, etc.

tariff duties which would measure only the difference in the cost of production here and abroad.

"There is both an alteration and an omission. Perhaps both were inadvertent. Perhaps Mr. Taft gave this construction to the tariff plank on which he was elected because otherwise it would hardly accord with his conclusion:

"In other words, the sound republican doctrine has become the imposition of duties only where the conditions are naturally unequal, and where duties are necessary to enable our manufacturers and other producers to meet on a level the competition of foreign producers.

"We do not here discuss the question inevitably raised by the contrast between what was the republican doctrine of protection—and what some republicans think it remains until the republican national convention meets again—and what Mr. Taft says that republican doctrine 'has become.'"

"We merely point out that these errors are far from identical—that they are, in fact, separated by a large part of the width of the political heavens. It is for each republican to decide for himself which creed is his."

The state of Wisconsin will send a solid delegation to the next republican national convention for Senator Robert M. La Follette, and a few months later the republicans of the state will vote for William Howard Taft for President.

The Chicago Tribune discovered, in its recent straw vote, that a large majority of the republican editors throughout the country were loyal to President Taft and his administration—a revelation to a paper which has long been destitute of any political policy.

One man got a divorce because his wife would not speak to him, another because his wife kissed him too much. One because his wife talked all the time and would not let him sleep. It is hard to please some people.

Someone has suggested that if the worthless bums that infest Janesville were put to work on the streets with a ball and chain they would cease traveling this way.

Good roads in city and country districts always mark a prosperous community. Janesville could do well to look after the roads leading into its business section.

Iola, Kansas, is at last off the publicity map. They have decided what to do with their woman prisoner who was sentenced to work on the streets.

In Tennessee a man provided in his will for his mule. That is, he left money for his food and shelter. Then talk about the mule having no future.

Some of the rich eastern families have begun to economize by having their daughters marry the chauffeurs so as to keep the money at home.

Cincinnati women are to investigate what "high-bills" really are. Well, the idea is all right, but they had better not taste the ingredients.

Will some brother who is long on knowledge kindly arise and explain what the tariff has to do with the present price of potatoes?

The articles by Mrs. Robert La Follette which will appear in the Gazette are full of interest to the women readers of the paper.

The county board might do well to thoroughly investigate the question of the work house problem. It is badly needed.

President Taft wants New Mexico and Arizona to get in right for they will be in the union for a long time.

Wisconsin politicians are just finding out how difficult it is to adjust themselves to the new adjustments.

Col. Astor may marry that girl with the "breakfast food" name, but he should stick to that brand hereafter.

If there is anything that congress does not want to investigate someone should step up and remind them of it.

The Woodmen's picnic is always successful and all will no doubt have a good time this year.

On Wednesday night the camp is going to Johnston to assist the lodge there in putting on their degree work.

Local Store Makes Unusual Offering in Shoes Tomorrow.

On account of the rain last Saturday our sale of ladies' oxfords was not as large as it might have been and did not accomplish its purpose, that of clearing our stocks. To make up for this we have today's oxfords, pattern, tan, black, and blue, some with 2 to 3 widths, narrow toes, on sale from 8 to 12 tomorrow morning at $1.00 per pair. There is still a good assortment and you will profit by calling early.

BANK AT MILTON JCT. ROBBED LAST NIGHT; LOOTED POSTOFFICE

Thieves Broke Into Store and Bank of W. H. Gates and Broke Open Safe; Small Dooty Rewarded.

Thieves last night broke into and robbed the postoffice at Milton Junction and the store of W. H. Gates, druggist, jeweler and banker of that village, securing four hundred dollars in stamps, forty dollars in cash belonging to the government and twelve belonging to Mr. Gates, and $100 in old coins. The robbery was committed between twelve and one o'clock.

The stamps, money and watches were removed from the jewelry vault in which all were kept in Mr. Gates' store. The knob of the combination, which locks the vault was broken off and the bolt driven in. The stamps and forty dollars, of which Charles B. Button had charge, were kept in a small box, which was taken by the robbers. That none of the stolen property will ever be recovered is the general impression as Mr. Gates has no record of the number of the watches.

A woman living nearby heard the burglars while they were at work and two men, one of whom is described as tall and the other short, were seen going toward the tracks of the St. Paul road about the time that a freight train from Madison to Milwaukee passed through the village last night. It is thought that the robbers stole a ride on this and went to Milwaukee. Entrance was gained by breaking out a panel in the back door.

If you would use French White Tooth Powder or French White Tooth Brush, you could keep your teeth in good condition. Try it for a year and you will wonder you had not thought of it before.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Thought for Today
By MRS. ROBERT M. LAFOLLETTE

LET'S WALK.

IT IS not long since women and girls were warned not to reach up or bend down, to avoid strains and all kinds of exercise of the muscles that must endure the severest strain if women perform the high mission of motherhood.

The body is strengthened and fortified by reasonable exercise and is weakened and enervated for want of it. If we would be really well, and enjoy the world and do work that is worth while, we must train and prepare for excellence, physically, as we do mentally.

It is strange how slowly even intelligent women respond to this truth. Take the illustration of the woman directed by her physician to walk for her health. She is apt to consider that she "just hates walking," a sufficient reason for not following his directions, and, may be, for changing doctors and employing one who prescribes only drugs as a remedy for her ills. Realizing her responsibility she would meet it differently. She would prepare for walking. She would set a time for it. She would be walking at that time. She would take "the constitutional" mechanically perhaps, for many days. But, oh joy, some day she would find herself wanting to go, then eager, and finally unable to do without the daily taste of out doors.

Because we do not incline to systematic exercise, is no reason why we should not make the effort to enjoy and take it. An appetite can be created, and nature helps all honest endeavor to reach the normal.

We should all walk more than we habitually do. Authorities agree that walking is one of the best constitutions. Few women walk enough, and most women walk too slowly. Make it a rule to walk at least a short distance every day. Increase the distance and speed gradually.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

HOW do you lie when you sleep? And can you lie in more than one position and be comfortable?

An important question? I'll admit it does sound so, but I'll tell you why I ask it. I have just been forcibly impressed with the danger of forming too rigid a habit in this respect.

A friend of mine was operated upon for appendicitis. The operation was eminently successful, but my friend had a pretty serious time of it simply because he had to lie on his back on account of the incision, and having invariably slept on his side all his life he could not get to sleep in the new position.

A young business woman contributes a less serious but none the less unpleasant experience. She sprained her right shoulder and, having a rigid habit of always sleeping on that side, lost several nights' sleep and was actually incapacitated for work because she had to lie on her back.

There has been much said in medical circles from time to time about the proper position in which to sleep.

Some doctors advocate sleeping on the back; others on the right side.

A prominent physician says that the normal position in which to sleep is on the stomach and that you will notice that a healthy child invariably sleeps on his stomach.

The left side, I believe, has no advocates at all, as lying on that side brings too great a pressure on the heart.

Of course, I don't know anything about all this, but one thing I do know and want to impress upon you, and that is that if you will train yourself to be able to sleep in more than one position, and especially to be able to sleep on the back, if necessary, you may be forestalling many sleepless and uncomfortable nights.

We have heard much talk lately about the danger of protruding batpins. So much, in fact, that I fancy we are rather scared of the subject and inclined to think the danger is overrated.

But here is one more word on the matter which has galvanized my indifference, at least, into a new realization of the possible danger and a resolution not to be at fault in this respect.

"I would ask you," writes my correspondent, "to sound a note of warning to the woman wearing long batpins in small hats. A most deplorable accident occurred to a young lady on the very eve of her graduation from Normal School, caused by the thoughtlessness of another of the graduates in wearing a long batpin in a small hat with point protruding two or three inches.

"The young lady in question was struck in the eye and may probably lose her sight.

"Now, I think, if many women and girls knew of this accident they would surely be more careful to regulate the length of the pin to the size of the hat, or, if a pin of the required length were not at hand, they could at least see to it that the head and not the point protruded."

SAVORY MEAT DISHES.

Breaded Tongue, Tomato Sauce.—Cut thick slices of cold boiled corned beef tongue. Season with pepper and salt, if needed. Brush over with beaten egg, roll in fine bread crumbs and saute in hot butter or other fat. Serve with tomato sauce.

Cheese in any form is very nutritious, but is best uncooked, as to digestibility. There are many ways of using cheese in dishes to add to the food content. Grated cheese adds to a dish of creamed potatoes or scalloped dishes of almost any vegetable. It is especially good with creamed celery.

Cheese Cutlets.—Melt three tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add two tablespoons of cornstarch mixed with one and a half tablespoons of flour. Cook until smooth; add gradually two-thirds of a cup of milk, stir and cook ten minutes. Add the yolks of two eggs slightly beaten, a cake of cream cheese cut in pieces, half a teaspoonful each of salt and Worcestershire sauce, a dash of tabasco and a half a cup of American cheese. Mix, but do not let it melt. Pour into a deep pie plate to cool. When firm, cut in pieces, dip in egg, roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Chipped Beef With Celery.—Pour hot water over half a pound of chipped beef, let it steep, and drain quickly. Melt two tablespoons of butter, add a cup of celery cut in small pieces; stir until the celery is delicately browned.

Cook a tablespoonful each of flour and cornstarch in a tablespoonful of butter, add a cup of milk, salt and pepper to taste and combine the two mixtures. Serve on triangles of toast.

Salted Almond Soup.—Take half a pound of blanched salted almonds. Put them through a meat chopper and grind like coarse meal. Cook two and a half tablespoons of cornstarch and two tablespoons of butter until thick; add a pint of clear veal broth, then add the almonds alternately with a quart of veal broth and a cup of cream. Season with salt and white pepper. Serve in cups with whipped cream on top of each cup.

The Country Cottage.

The country cottage is the hope of the young and the solace of the old; it is the middle-aged, with their exaggerated ideas of comfort, their unreasonable desire for dry walls, brilliant lighting, hot and cold water, and the telephone, who complicate the question of the Saturday rush to the green fields.—Sketch.

The Difference.

What is the difference between a gardener, a billiard player, a gentleman and a sexton? The first minds his peas; the second minds his cues; the third minds his p's and q's; the fourth minds his keys and pews.

FEVER PURIFIES.

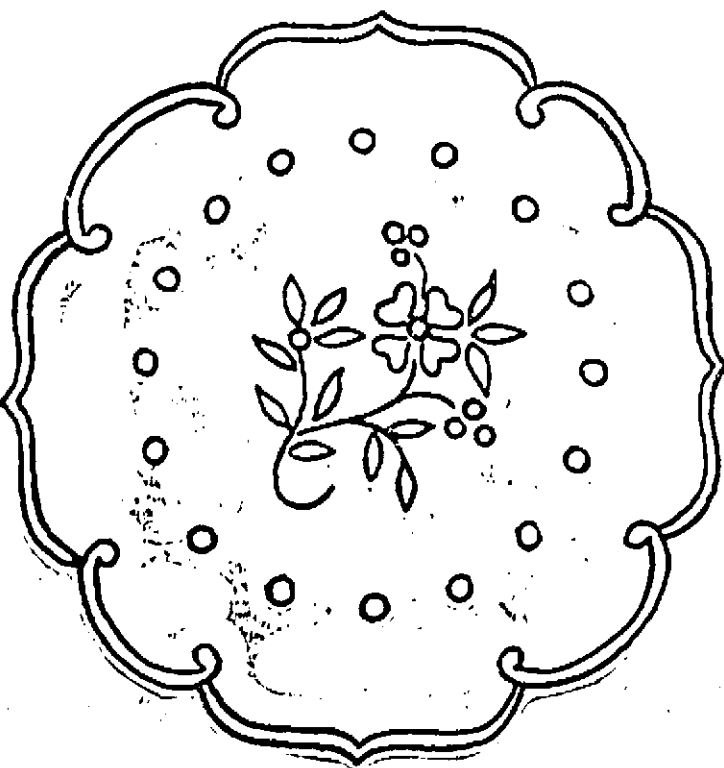

Fever is a means of purification, although the germs that help to produce it do harm, like the rats that cleared away the garbage in certain tenement districts in great cities before public sanitation took care of it. The blood, if it has the necessary strength, will destroy the germs, by the time the waste matter is cleaned out, but to do this, establishing immunity from attack by that particular kind of fever again (in some cases) requires the expenditure of much vitality, and while the net result of the fever may be good, such a system of housecleaning is not recommended, unless there is no other way; nature can command—where there is. Whether it is wise to prevent certain diseases when they become necessary, by the use of anti-toxins, is an interesting question which we cannot discuss here.

If when such a crisis comes, there is a fair supply of all the elements needed to carry on the life processes, if the tissues are in the main sound, the vital organs, especially heart, lungs and kidneys, the patient will recover, even though all is not done that might be done to remove the obstacles that hinder nature's process of cure, and to supply pure air, water, light, right mental influence and food that will furnish what the system needs and yet call for the least draft on vitality, when convalescence begins.

THE HUGE BAG CROWN A FALL HAT FEATURE.

As will be noted, the general shape of this hat is along the lines of the rolled brim models that have been popular for a twelvemonth; but the crown is an entirely new feature. It is made of velvet and is enormous in size, bagging a little over the back of the brim and filling the space within the roll of the brim. At front is perched a smart feather ornament with a pom-pom of fluffy marabout emanating from a sheath of red and orange grobe feathers. The hat is of buff colored felt and the crown of reddish brown velvet.

SMALL PINCUSHION COVER.

This makes a dainty pillow for a little pin cushion to be slipped in bag, or dress-suit case. The scallops are padded, and closely buttonholed. The flowers and leaves are worked in the solid satin stitch, with the dots as eyelets and the stems in the outline stitch. The back is made just like the top, leaving out the flowers in the center. When finished, a little pin cushion is placed between the two covers, which are faced together with narrow ribbon. Mercerized cotton No. 25 is used.

England's First Airship. History repeated itself when a Lord's debate was interrupted by a aeroplane. For when Lunard made the first balloon ascent in England on September 15, 1784, a cabinet council was engaged on most important state deliberations. But King George said: "My lords, we shall have an opportunity of discussing this question at another time, but we may never again see poor Lunard; so let us adjourn the council and observe the balloon."—London Chronicle.

AVOID DECEPTION

Use Newbro's Herpicide Instead. Wearing artificial hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair.

Most ladies would regret any imputation of personal carelessness and neglect. And yet very many women permit the natural hair to become so dull, brittle and lustreless that it looks no better than the artificial.

All this is an unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that is unsightly or thin may usually be attributed to the unhygienic activity of the dandruff germ. This vicious germ burrows down into the hair follicle, shortly destroying its life. The hair becomes dead, loose and finally drops out.

There is a remedy sold by all druggists, the intelligent use of which will kill the dandruff germ. It also cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the luster of life and beauty.

That remedy is Newbro's Herpicide, the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. This preparation in one dollar also bottles is sold and guaranteed everywhere.

Applications may be obtained at the best hair shops and hair dressing parlors.

The Herpicide Co., Dept. H., Detroit, Mich., will send also sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of 10c in postage or silver.

Character Above All. Young man, character is worth more than money, character is worth more than anything else in this wide world. I would rather have it said of me in my old age than to have a monument of pure gold built over my dead body reaching from earth to heaven—I would rather have it said that "they could find no occasion against him except it be touching the law of his God," than to have all this world can give.—Dwight L. Moody.

BY CAPT. F. A. MITCHEL

"WOMAN ON THE LOWED T WAGON."

THIS Celebrated Civil War Novel is one of the American classics. Written by Captain F. A. Mitchel, the soldier-author, the story gives a most realistic picture of the great struggle fifty years ago.

Those who read this story in the past will be glad to have an opportunity to follow its plot once more, just as they find pleasure in reading again the works of Dickens, Thackeray and Scott.

Romance Fighting Capture Escape Danger Reward

You will want to read of the adventures of Mark Maynard, the scout hero, who freely risked his life for his country.

"Chattanooga" begins in this issue of The Gazette. Don't fail to read it.

The Candid Girl
by Barbara Boyd

Gives Some Reasons Why Bachelors Are Often Pessimists.

"DON'T wonder some bachelors got sour and morose," said the Candid Girl.

"Yes," said the widow, "they need a woman to keep their heart young and tender."

"Soothe to me," said the Candid Girl, "the trouble is there's too much woman. That's what makes them pessimistic. If I were a bachelor—well of course, it's a different position."

"What were you going to suggest," inquired the widow.

"I was merely thinking of the letters they got," said the Candid Girl. "Girls write them under the filiciest pretext, or without pretext. And when they don't get an answer, they write again, saying they fear their first letter miscarried. A bachelor's mail is a revelation of the foolishness of feminines. If a bachelor could be induced to tell what he really thinks of these letters, it would be interesting. But of course, he's too honorable. Only sometimes, you can tell a lot by the queer little smile on his lips and the way he drops a letter into the waste basket."

"Then, if a bachelor could be induced to talk, I think his conversation about the telephone calls he gets would be interesting. Sometimes, in a business office, I have heard a bachelor swear softly to himself when a girl has called him up and tried to make a date with him. And he looks so bored and sour when he gets back to his desk, after making all sorts of excuses as to why he can't come any night that week. It is things like that that turn a bachelor into a pessimist."

"Unless it makes him conceited," said the widow.

"Then, if he's the least bit attentive to a girl, he's afraid she and her family will begin to have anticipations."

"That is, if he's getting old and wary," said the widow.

"He just has to garden himself to what people say, and the hardening process never is good for anyone."

"Then," went on the Candid Girl, "everybody is pitying him on anniversaries like Christmas and Thanksgiving, and thinking how lonesome he is, when probably he is rejoicing in his peace and quiet."

"And he is expected to fling money around recklessly because he has only himself to think about, and if he doesn't he's thought stupid; whereas, nobody knows what he may be wanting to save money for. His lot isn't so enviable as may be supposed."

"Well, he doesn't have to be a bachelor, if he doesn't want to," said the widow.

"No, of course not," said the Candid Girl, "but what I was objecting to, was that if he did want to be a bachelor, it was a pity that conditions were often such as to make him a pessimist as well."

The Cat Tail.

The cat tail of the American swamps is almost exactly the same plant as the Egyptian bullrush. It is no longer used for making paper as it once was, but from its roots is prepared an astringent medicine, and its stems are used for the manufacture of mats, chair-bottoms and the like.

A FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY
BY F. A. MITCHELL.

PROLOGUE.

Just fifty years ago the great civil war, which arrayed north against south, brother against brother and father against son, was the all absorbing real life tragedy of the time. This romance, written by a soldier who is the son of a great general, gives the son and the grandson of today an absorbing view of the perils faced by sire and grandfathers of half a century ago. A northern spy penetrating the southern lines with the shadow of the hangman's noose over before him; a fair daughter of the south divided in her allegiance between love and duty; a mere boy with wits sharpened by the vicissitudes of war; a slip of a girl, ignorant, but brave, loyal and self sacrificing; a chivalrous soldier in gray who fought and loved in vain—these are the leading actors in "Chattanooga."

CHAPTER I.

NO MAN'S LAND.

It was the twentieth of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two. Corinth had been evacuated more than two months before. The army of the Ohio had moved westward into northern Alabama. The president and cabinet Union generals were anxious as to east Tennessee, where, it was rumored, the Confederates were preparing for some new move.

High in the Cumberland mountains a soldier in the blue and yellow uniform of a private of cavalry sat on his horse looking down on the valleys of the Sequatchie and the Tennessee. A carbine was slung over his shoulder; a Colt's revolver was at his hip. He was long and lithe and graceful. About him was an air of refinement seldom found under a private's uniform except during that war which called out men from all classes, both in the north and in the south. His hair was light, his blue eyes were restless and denoted his possessor to be a man of great mental and physical activity.

As the soldier gazed down upon the expansive view different expressions flitted across his face. At one moment there was a serious look, such as men wear on the eve of battle; at another a smiling expression; then a dreamy one. He saw territory that lay beyond the Union lines. He wondered what warlike scenes were hidden down there within the blending of rocks and rivers and undulations, lying calm and sweet before him that summer afternoon. Were clusters of white tents there? Were brigades, divisions, army corps marching?

Now he thought he could hear a distant cracking of cannons and gun carriages. But he knew this could not be. If they were there, they were too far to be heard. The sounds never became real. The young man's fancies were always broken by the actual rustle of the leaves or some sound from the furred or feathered inhabitants of the mountains.

Then a scene he had passed through the previous evening came up before him. He stood in the presence of a general of division—the finest specimen of physical splendor of all the generals of the Union army—one who was a year later to achieve the title of "The Rock of Chickamauga." This general was speaking with his subordinate was listening respectfully and attentively.

"I am ordered by the department commander to find out what is going on at Chattanooga. Our reconnaissance parties have thus far brought up nothing except that there is no enemy very near. We are liable to be flanked and cut off from east Tennessee. See here!" He turned to a map spread out on a pine table. "Here is Chattanooga; here the Sequatchie valley; up here to the north is Knoxville, held by General Kirby Smith for the Confederates. Here is Cumberland gap. If the enemy is concentrating at Chattanooga, he may not only hold it against a greatly superior force, but can march right along here—form a junction with General Smith at Knoxville, and into Kentucky, Louisville and Cincinnati will be in danger. Forrest and Morgan are hammering at our communications; we get reports of immense forces of the enemy at Knoxville; everything points to the part of the Confederates. If so, they must be concentrating at Chattanooga as a point of rendezvous."

The general paused; then looking the soldier in the eye said impressively: "You are the only man to whom I can trust so important a mission. I can't order you, as you know, beyond our lines, except in uniform. Go as far as you dare as a soldier; I leave the rest to you. Will you undertake to bring me the information we require?"

"I will, general."

"Very well. The fate of this army, the success of the Union arms in the west, perhaps the prolongation of the war, depend upon you."

The young man bowed, but said nothing.

"You will need a pass to get beyond our pickets." The general drew a camp chair beside a pine table and took up a pen. "How will you have it written?"

"Pass Private Mark Malone—his name will do as well as any—beyond our lines at will."

The general wrote the pass and handing it to Private Malone, "Go, and God bless you," he said. He took his commissary's hand and pressed it heartily.

As the words, "Go, and God bless you!" rang again in memory the soldier touched the flanks of his horse lightly with his great brass spurs and began to descend the mountain.

An hour later he entered the little town of Jasper. Riding up to the tavern he reined in his horse and let him drink at the rough wooden trough in front. A number of country people were sitting on the veranda, and every one fixed his eyes on the soldier, who sat on his horse looking about him with as much apparent indifference as if he were within the Union lines.

When the animal had drunk his fill his rider cast the reins to a negro and dismounted. Then, detaching his carbine from where he had hooked it to his saddle, he took it in his hand and tramped into the house to the jungle of his spurs.

Not a word was spoken by those watching in admiration the strapping young fellow with so young a face set on so stalwart a frame. He paid no attention to them, but walked into the dining room and called for supper. After devoting himself to a plate of bacon and corn bread, with a cup of chocolate in lieu of coffee for the blockade of the southern ports had stopped the flow of the coffee bean from foreign countries, he walked out on the gallery, and seating himself on a wooden bench took a briarwood pipe and a tobacco pouch out of his pocket and began to smoke.

Jasper was "no man's land." The people living there and thereabout were nearly all Confederate sympathizers, but had learned to look for Union or Confederate troops with an equal chance of either. From the moment of the soldier's arrival they had discussed his coming in whispers. Soldiers of either side usually came in numbers. It was seldom that a single trooper had the hardihood to enter the town of Jasper alone, especially one wearing the blue. Presently an old man dressed in "buttered" got up from his seat among the loungers and approached the stranger for the purpose of reconnaissance:

"Heckon y' come from Decherd, Yank?"

"Where?"
"At Sparty."
"No."
"Marfreesboro?"
"I don't know."
"Heckon there's a powerful sight at McMinnville?"

"A division perhaps."
"That's an all-fired pert ride o' yours. Wouldn't mind lettin me handle it, would y'?"

Mark cocked the piece, took off the cap and handed it to his interrogator. He still had his revolver, while the man had a weapon which could not be fired without a percussion cap.

"Want, now, the's quar."
The man looked from the rifle to the soldier, not knowing which to admire most—the mechanism of the former or the coolness of the latter. Then he handed it back.

"You ain't no Yank,"
"Why not?"

"Yanks don't come down hyar all alone. Besides a Yankee sojer wouldn't ride a blooded mare like that one. Morgan's men rides them kind o' critters and wears them uniforms sometimes."

Mark smiled knowingly.
"You think I'm one of Colonel Morgan's men, do you?"

"Heckon yur one o' ourn anyway."
And the man walked away well satisfied with his penetration.

The soldier got up, went into the tavern and paid for his supper with one of the postal scripplasters used at the time in lieu of silver; then he came out and called for his horse. While waiting he stood leaning against a post of the gallery, maintaining the same easy confidence that had characterized him since his arrival. Presently a negro came around from the barn, leading the slender legged mare, and the soldier, mounting up to her lightly, stroked her neck; then mounting, without once looking at his observers, he rode away.

But Private Malone's confidence was all assumed. He did not start on the road he designed to follow; he trotted off up the valley, intending later to find a path or a crossroad which would take him southward to the Chattanooga pike. He suspected that the group he was leaving would not suffer him to ride that night in safety, and he did not care to let them know his true route.

When he was riding in the open he felt comparatively confident, but upon entering a thicket he would usually reach down and put his hand upon his rifle. He knew the bushwhacker of the period, and fancied that a rifle or a shotgun lurked behind every tree. The twilight was nearly faded. Mark had gone about three miles from the tavern when, hearing a fork in the road, he heard:

"Thit, thit!"

Instinctively his hand went to the handle of his revolver, for the sound was near enough to indicate that a pistol rather than a rifle might be needed.

"Air you up the sojer ez tuk supper at the tavern at Jasper?" asked a voice, singularly soft for a bushwhacker.

"Well, suppose I am!"

"I know y' from yer voice."

"How's that?" asked the soldier, puzzled.

"Kind o' deep and smoothlike. Y' thought as you put up yer shoulder iron, I got a head on y'."

"Well, what do you want with me?"

"I'm one of the Slacks. We're Union, we Slacks air. They're goen to drive us out soon, I reckon."

"Union, ah? What are you—man, woman, boy or gal?"

"I'm a gal."

"The dikesen! What are you stoppin' me for at the muzzle of a gun?"

"Lordy! How'd I know y'?"

"Mought 'n' be a bushwhacker. I war at the tavern whar y' tuk supper. The landlady's wife, she's my aunt. I sar y' come in and hear y' talken to old Venables. They reckoned y' war Confederate till y' paid in Yankee scripplasters; then they reckoned y' mought be Yankee after all."

Mark began to be interested. It was now evident to him that this person concealed behind a snake fence, holding him under cover of a gun, was a friend instead of an enemy.

"Well?"

"I kom out hyar to tell y' 'bout it." "Then let me see you as well as hear you."

A figure with a gun climbed over the fence and advanced toward the soldier. When it came near enough Mark saw a girl who might be anywhere between sixteen and eighteen, for her skirt only reached to the tops of her shoes, and her hair was cut square around her neck. She came very near to him and spoke in a low tone:

"After y' left the tavern some, on 'em

"lowed y' was Union, and some on 'em 'lowed y' was Confederate; kenstaways, they wasn't sarth. Uncle, he's bad seesah, and he 'lowed y' was Union and bound on some errand for the Yankees. So he persuaded several on 'em ter mount 'n' follow y'.

BOMK ON EN 'LOWED Y' WAS UNION.

They were gotten ready, and I slipped out to the barn and tuk my pony, what I rode over on this afternoon, 'n' Jakey's squirrel gun (Jakey's my brother), what I alius carries when I ride round in these hyar war times. 'n' I makes tracks cross country by a trail I alius goes to uncle's 'n' comes hum agin while the men air comen by the road. I just rode Sally Martin among the trees thar and tied her and squatted behind the fence till y' come along and—Lordy sakes!"

"What's the matter now?"

"Listen."

They were both quiet for a moment, the girl's two big black eyes denoting her anxiety. They could distinctly hear the tread of horses coming on a brisk lope.

Without a word the girl seized Mark's bridle rein and led horse and rider off the road into the wood. At a short distance behind a rise in the ground she stopped. Mark was inclined to go on farther.

"No, no," she said hurriedly. "My pony's right thar. If she catches sight of your horse she'll whinny."

Mark dismounted, and the girl, plucking a handful of grass, held it to his horse's mouth to keep her attention from other matters that she might not weigh and betray them. The two stood looking at each other while the sounds grow louder, dreading every moment that either one of their horses might give the signal that would lead to their discovery. There were evidently not less than half a dozen of the horsemen on the road, altogether too many for one man, even if well armed, to meet.

The men rode up to the fork of the road, where they reined in their horses for a parley. It was a question doubtless which road the Yankee soldier had taken. Presently they divided, one party taking the left hand road to Tracy City, the other the road leading up the valley.

As soon as they were gone Mark took the girl's hand and gave it a grateful pressure:

"God bless you, my girl; you've saved me from capture or being shot in the back—shot, I expect."

The girl shuddered. She knew well enough the fate he would have met if his pursuers had overtaken him. They would have come upon him warily and shot him from behind a tree. When the sounds from the retreating horsemen had died away in the distance she said:

"Come!"

A lively discussion is now going on in the agricultural press as to whether the pig is liable to have his form pressed out of shape by sleeping on a cement floor. The man who is so cruel as to encourage this practice ought to be made to sleep on the upper deck of a piglet fence, clad in deep thought and pink pajamas, and see how he likes it.

There is no surer way to freeze the bottom of a cupulent about with bolts than to allow him to sleep on a cement floor with a surface as cold as the successful candidate for congress immediately after election. The up-to-date farmer, or perhaps his hog house with bamboos, and there is no more cheering sight than a row of pleasant-faced pigs rocking idly to and fro and snoring softly in their sleep. The pig which is driven to root on an ice-bound floor is a shining mark for the quincy germ, and you are liable to find him some morning with pale hands folded peacefully across his tenderloin. Give the pig all the comforts of home.

The man who will invent a corn planter which does not stutter will confer a greater benefit upon humanity than the one who patented the ball-bearing safety razor. The planter with an impediment in its speech is responsible for more failures of the corn crop than a Kansas hot wind, which in its paining days would cut the rust off a rock crusher. If you have one of those hop, step and jump planters, which has a choking spout every twenty feet, telephone the junk dealer. It is as hopeless a proposition as the man who calls on the trade in a red vest and a breath imported from Louisville, Kentucky.

It is a good thing to live in peace and harmony with all mankind, but when a herd of pigeon-toed milch cows belonging to a neighbor who is too shiftless to keep up his fences tramples down your sweet corn, that is the time to invite him into the alley.

If you do a neat and workmanlike job, your garden will be as secure from attack as an erring deacon with an alibi.

Loss of Time means Loss of Pay.

Kidney trouble and the ill it breeds means lost time and lost pay to many a working man. M. Balent, 1214 Little Emma St., Streator, Ill., was an bad from kidney and bladder trouble that he could not work, but he says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills for only a short time and I got entirely well and was soon able to go back to work, and am feeling well and healthier than before." Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, quick in results—a good friend to the working man or woman who suffers from kidney ill. Foley Kidney Pills will check the progress of your kidney and bladder trouble and heal by removing the cause. Try them, Badger Drug Co.

Deplorable.

"I'm afraid there isn't much future in store for my son," remarked Mr. Manyplunks.

"Isn't he ambitious?" asked Mr. Hazzard.

"Oh, yes, but his ambition seems limited to the desire to smoke a more expensive brand of cigarettes than any other young youth in town."

Very Particular.

Wags—That thunder and lightning scene in your act won't go in a rolled show.

Torg—Why not?

Wags—Because the thunder is too loud and the lightning is apt to be too striking.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Tuesday, Aug. 15, 1871.

Dear and Forbear,

Were it not for the respect which we have for the feelings of one of our most worthy citizens, we would tell how a bear got loose in a large pig pen, and how the aforesaid citizen volunteered to catch the bear and save the swine from destruction; how he boldly entered the arena and advanced upon the enemy, and how brain suddenly turned upon him with an open countenance; we could tell how fast he walked to get out of the way, with what agility he climbed to the top rail of the fence and fell off on the other side, and how nervous he was when he tried to get up and walk. As we before remarked, we could narrate all these circumstances and put them before our readers with such startling vividness that none of them would ever think of denying the assertion that truth is stranger than fiction. But we forbear.

ROW CLOSES SOCIALIST MEET

Last Session of Conference Marked by Disorder—J. M. Barnes Resigns.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 15.—Disorder marked the closing session of the Socialist national conference here.

A physical encounter between State Senator W. R. Gaylord and J. M. Barnes, a delegate from Missouri, was narrowly averted, when the Missourian accused Gaylord and Congressman Victor L. Berger of disrupting the party in Missouri. Gaylord told Gaylord, who had recently been lecturing in Missouri, that he was not wanted, and said that the Milwaukee Socialists were a lot of "dummies." Gaylord retorted with, "I have your record."

J. Mahlon Barnes, secretary of the Socialist national committee, resigned.

A resolution was passed, asking that the national executive committee be instructed to call the next conference next summer.

John Ledbetter, shot in face.

All four men were taken to Shawneetown, Ill., for medical attention.

Markham, it is reported, had lost money gambling in a houseboat operated by Aly, Harris and Ledbetter on the Little Wabash river.

New Meat Boller.

A boller, invented by a Virginian, holds the meat to be cooked in a vertical position within a casing that catches every drop of juice that falls from it.

More people, men and women, are suffering from kidney and bladder troubles than ever before, and each year more of them turn for relief and permanent benefit to Foley's Kidney Remedy, which has proven itself to be one of the most effective remedies for kidney and bladder ailments that medical science has devised. POINTERS ON NORTHERN WISCONSIN

Wisconsin is not half developed agriculturally, and yet is a great agricultural state; not because of the large area under cultivation, but because of the high average production of the acres sown.

Wisconsin is the greatest fruit and cheese state now; what of the future? The whole area of Northern Wisconsin is splendidly drained by deeply indented rivers and creeks and well adapted to dairying and stock raising.

Northern Wisconsin is free from disastrous storms and droughts.

The farmers, right at the door, pay the highest prices for every article he has to sell.

The freight saved in Northern Wisconsin will make the farmers rich.

I can give you many other points why you should invest your money in Northern Wisconsin. Come in and see me.

I can sell you land on which you will become rich in a few years at prices ranging from $7.50 to $20.00 per acre and give you TEN years in which to pay for it.
